Office Hours: Wednesday 11am-12pm, Loree 116 or by appointment

Course Description:

This course introduces students to the academic study of religion by focusing on major theorists of religion, theories of religion, and key concepts and approaches to the study of religion. Among the theories discussed will be the works of E. B. Tylor, Sigmund Freud, Karl Marx, Émile Durkheim, and Clifford Geertz. Looking at primary and secondary sources, including visual material, in order to explore the concept of religion, and its' lived practices we will look at the historical and contemporary dynamics, which have constructed various definitions and approaches to the idea of religion. Some topics to be explored are religion and gender, religion and the environment, and sacred space.

This course fulfills CORE requirements:

21st Century Challenges [21Cb]

b. Analyze a contemporary global issue from a multidisciplinary perspective.

This course fits especially well with the 21st Century Challenge Goals b. The comparisons of multiple religious traditions, practices, institutions, and world-views should accomplish 21Ca quite well. The interdisciplinary nature of religious studies also lends itself to 21Cb, as evident below in the readings drawn from the social sciences (especially psychology, sociology, and cultural anthropology) as well as from the disciplines of history, cultural studies, and cognitive science.

[AH] Arts and Humanities

o. Examine critically philosophical and other theoretical issues concerning the nature of reality, human experience, knowledge, value, and/or cultural production.

This course fulfills AHo in an especially elegant way. Indeed, the sphere designated as “the religious” has been a primary focus for asking and answering questions about the nature of reality, human experience, knowledge, and value. In academic circles today, much of this is treated in departments such as philosophy, history, literature, and the social sciences. And yet for our students—and in popular culture generally—the “religious” continues to serve as a primary space for asking and answering such questions. The study of religion thus offers a natural point of entry into rethinking taken-for-granted norms and values in a critical way.

The Required Texts for the course:

Textbooks are available at the Rutgers Bookstore, a Barnes & Noble College Bookstore—One Ferren Mall.

- ❖ Daniel Pals, Nine Theories of Religion 3rd ed. (Oxford, 2014)
- ❖ ALL other articles and primary sources will be available on SAKAI.
- ❖ Other readings or media may be assigned during the course of the semester.
- ❖ ALL reading must be completed prior to the class for which it is assigned

Attendance & Participation

Students are expected to attend each class on time. Attendance will be taken at each class meeting. You are permitted three unexcused absences. Following the third unexcused absence 1/3 of a letter grade will be deducted for each unexcused absence. Students who encounter any extended problem with absences, for example, for medical or family emergencies, or religious reasons, must inform me in writing about the reason and duration of the absence. Decisions on excused absences will be made on a case-by-case basis.

Students are expected to attend all classes; if you expect to miss one or two classes, please use the University absence reporting website <https://sims.rutgers.edu/ssra/> to indicate the date and reason for your absence. An email is automatically sent to me.

Student participation is an integral component for the success of this class. Course participants will be expected to arrive to class on time, and prepared to discuss the assigned readings. Please bring assigned readings to class, as we will frequently consult the text, particularly the primary sources. Participation not only means asking questions and involving oneself in the classroom discussion, it also means actively listening to others.

 Students are required to read the materials in advance of our class meetings. Pop quizzes will be given if the instructor feels that students are coming to class unprepared.

Requirements & Grading System:

Please note, this is the grading scale that I will use for this class:

100-92 A, 91-87 B+, 86-80 B, 79-77 C+, 76-70 C, 69-60 D, 59-below F.
